How are we, as parents, going to make sure that our son or daughter with a disability has a good life, both now and after we die?

Who will make sure that the plans we have arranged and the services we have secured are implemented and functioning well after we are gone?

How do we make sure our child is not lonely, isolated or neglected?

How do we give caring friends and family an opportunity to have a fulfilling relationship with our child?

How am I, a person with a disability, going to achieve these goals for myself?

What Is A Personal Network?

Personal networks are intentional communities of friends, family members and acquaintances who assist and collaborate with a person who may be at risk of isolation because of disability.

Personal networks promote planning and social opportunities, assist with decision-making and goal setting, and work with the person-at-the-center to be a sustainable resource after parents can no longer be available.

Five Key Components Of Networks

- #1 Relationships are the key to a good life and the foundation of networks
- #2 No disability precludes relationship
- #3 Successful networks are directed by individuals and/or families
- #4 Networks focus on contribution
- #5 Everyone benefits -- community

---

Explore What?

- . Why start a network?
- . Who will I invite?
- . What do I want the network to accomplish?
- . How big should the network be?
- . What are my hopes for my daughter's future?
- . What scares me about my son's future?
- . What are my apprehensions about starting a network?
- . What excites me about starting a network?
- . What else?

What Do We Ask of Network Members?

- Caring about the person-at-center and his/her family
- Building relationships with each other in the network
- Making time to meet for 2 hours 3-4 times per year and more often when the need arises
- Serving in a network organization role, such as facilitator, meeting organizer or scribe
- Willing to learn about person-at-center's interests, disability, services, and supports
- Ensuring that the network keeps meeting
- Working with group to replace yourself if you have to leave the network

What do Families Say About Having a Network?

- The Crisis Team was right there with us for back-to-back (to-back) hospitalizations. And the recovery from each! Bob and I have found this support to be a massive game changer. We felt part of a team of peers working together to care for Oliver, care for Apollo and ourselves, put food on the table, stay connected, work, think about what we need, and rest. THIS is a night and day difference from trying to grit it out on our own. Our appreciation for the Crisis Team runs deep!
- Taking these first steps of starting a network leaves me feeling hopeful that we can build a strong community of support for my daughter
- I know that this network will be such an important and special part of my sister's life, and I look forward to future meetings and all that is to come!
- Meeting with the network has put a dent in my skepticism
- I am so happy that I finally did this!!!
- Over time, I see network members becoming more invested in my son's future.

What do Network Members Say About Being Part of a Network?

- It's a great way to put our minds together and think about someone we all care about
- It's given me a really clear way to be a part of his life and support his family
- I wanted to support my best friend with her younger brother
- We always know there's going to be a group of people there for her
- It felt like an honor to be asked to be included in the network
- I like having a defined role in how I can support him
